

CE-marking of woodburning Harvia sauna stoves

- 1.7.2012 CE marking of woodburning sauna stoves became compulsory on the European economic area, excluding Finland, Sweden, Great Britain, Ireland and Norway.
- 1.7.2013 CE marking of woodburning sauna stoves will become compulsory in all countries on the European economy area.

After these dates it is not allowed to bring products without CE marking to the market – the actual schedule and transition time may vary from region to region. Products that are in resellers' warehouses are considered to be on the market, they can be sold and installed normally. CE marking will not be required retrospectively. Harvia sauna stoves have the CE marking.

Changes in products

The protective distances and sauna size recommendations have changed. The instructions have now more product-specific information.

All CE marked stoves have the upper connection opening flange extended to 25 mm. The connection opening plug has been updated respectively, and is now easier to install on the rear connection opening.

The body of Harvia M1/M2/M3 has been redesigned. The stone space now heats more efficiently and evenly, air circulation in the stone space has improved and excess water can exit through an opening in the back.

BlmSchV marking (Germany)

In addition to CE requirements, Germany has national requirements (BlmSchV). To meet the BlmSchV criteria, the stoves must be equipped with a "BlmSchV set", which includes

- two steel plates for controlling combustion air
- BlmSchV user instructions
- BlmSchV type label (aluminum sticker) to be attached on top of the basic label on the ash box.

The following Harvia sauna stoves have the BlmSchV marking:

- Harvia 20 Pro
- Harvia 20 SL
- Harvia 20 ES Pro
- Harvia 20 ES Pro Steel
